Everyone achieves their best differently

One thing we all want to do is to do our best. But managers and leaders face an additional challenge: how to help others give of their best.

One of the keys to achieving this goal is to recognise that people respond to incentives, challenges, opportunities and environments in different ways; what motivates one may discourage another. People give of their best in different ways - discretionary effort, attitude, creativity, motivating other team members. So it’s important for us to acknowledge that one person’s “best” will be different to another’s.

An invaluable tool to understanding these intrinsic differences between and among people is the Myers-Briggs Type Indicator (MBTI®). MBTI is a proven tool for personal, professional and team development, as well as supporting:

- Career development
- Management and leadership training
- Organisational change

To experience the benefits of the MBTI®, join us for our next MBTI workshop at Pacific Centre on the Gold Coast. Or call us to arrange a program for your team.
